John Pawlowski Head Coach

John Pawlowski, a former major league pitcher, spent the previous nine seasons as the head coach at the College of Charleston, where he led the program to three NCAA postseason berths, one Super Regional appearance and four Southern Conference titles. Prior to that he spent one season at Arizona State and five seasons at Clemson as an assistant coach.

Pawlowski posted a 338-192-1 record during his tenure at Charleston, including a 180-67 record from 2004-07, the most wins in school and Southern Conference history for a four year span.

Pawlowski led the Cougars to consecutive NCAA Regional appearances from 2004-06, while winning Southern Conference regular season titles in 2004 and 2005. His 2004 squad set a then-school record with 47 wins and bettered that mark in 2005 with 48 victories. The 2004 conference title and NCAA appearance were both firsts in the program's history.

Pawlowski led Charleston to unprecedented heights in 2006. Charleston, which posted a 46-17 overall record and a 20-7 league mark, finished ranked as high as 12th nationally after winning the school's first Southern Conference Tournament title and the NCAA Lexington Regional championship. The team also made its first-ever Super Regional appearance before bowing out to Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

He was named Southern Conference Coach of the Year three times during his tenure in Charleston.
